Slam Poet
Odd Rod
Tuesday, October 11, 2016
9:00 p.m.
Boomer’s

Odd?Rod has lived a long hard life. He was raised in poverty without a father present and drug addicted mother. Rod went from school to school due to custody battles between his mother and other family members. No matter how things looked earlier in life, God has truly shined on him by blessing him with many talents to express himself.

He is a strong artist, designer, poet, and singer. Since college, Rod has written 3 poetic biographies. He has starred in many different commercials because of his talents. He was the writer and actor in Jacksonville’s 2006 See it, Say it, Stop it crime prevention campaign. He was the voice of the NFL promotional campaign Lets Do This (The Rashean Mathis Commercial).

No doubt, life has been hard for Rod but he has come a long way to deliver a message of perseverance and courage through his talents and his heart. Truly odd indeed, Rod has just started and has already formed a legacy behind him.

BANNED BOOK AWARENESS

Banned Books Week is an annual event highlighting the value of free speech and open access to information. Each year school libraries, public libraries, and academic libraries are pressured into removing or restricting access to books. Banned Books Week brings attention to this, and shows the harm of restricting or censoring books.

The University Library System has never had any plans to ban or restrict access to books due to pressure from outside sources. Some libraries are not so lucky, however. Stop by Haskell Memorial Library to take a look at our Banned Book Display to see some of the books that have been banned by other libraries—you may be surprised by what you see.

The Banned Book Display will go up the week of 9/25 and will be available to view until 10/10. As with all of our displays, the books are available for checkout.
